But if it were granted placed in the foreground by German agitators to-morrow, it would take some time for the negro over since the Schleswig-Holstein question was to be strong enough, or plucky enough, to make heard of. It has been shown a thousand times good his claim to it, or for the whites to resign by German Professors that Solleswig-Holstein is themselves to seeing him enjoy it. Well, it is now dem u- louses, Lands, Tenements, &c. strated, not by English or Danish but by Anstrian and Prussian statesmen, to the satisfaction, we may hope, of the obstinate Professors, that Schleswig and Hol-tein are not one indivisible State. but two Dochies. A concurrent testimony of the leading Powers of Garmany should weigh for something on this point, Prussis and Austria have divided the Duchies between them, and thus declare, with there is no State of Schleswig-Holstein. Two obstacles—the fitle of the Dake of Augustenburg and the indivisbility of Schleswig-Holstein-have. ing thus been got rid of the way is now prepared for each further changes as the interests or exigeneies of the two great Powers of Germany may require. In the recent diplomatic conflict between those Powers Prusers, as usual, has gained all the advantage. The statesmen of the two countries have not been indifferent to the claims of decorum. and accordingly the arrangements made at Gastein, and confirmed at Salaburg, have been invested with the form of a compromise. But the public will know what mamo to give to an agreement in which the tangible gains are on one side, and the concessions on the other. The military occupation and civil administration of Helatein are a hurden to Austria, which can neither b ps nor desire to acquire territory in the North of Germany, and the necuniary indemnity which |

The military eccupation of S hloswig by Prussia has a nifferent character; it given its Government the means of ecouring its objects in both Duchies by direct action on the pennle in Holstein, and by serving as a material gunrantee in its hands. But the Prussian Governmont, mindful as it is of the future, has trusted nothing to chance which could be secured at once Personal audicity has hitherto served it well, but it nevertheless realises its advantages as rapidly as possible, and makes them as hinding as treaty ingigements can do. Thus the agreement of Gastein contains, along with temporary arrangements, others that are definitive and of high importance. Such is the stipulation regarding and dage Streets and of two bundred and twenty Randsburg, which irrespective of anything that may be determined us to the sovereignty of Hol- | perficial area of about 19000 sounce feet. stein, is henceforth to be garrisoned as a Federal fortress, while Kiel, although in Holstein, is to he occupied by the Prussians, and become a harbour for their navy. More than this, the entire! Duchy of Lauenburg is ceded to Prussia for ever. This arrangement reproduces one the worst features of the old system of conquests with which if the First Napoleon familiarized Europe, and which | sent complet by Messrs, R. Movingons & Co. so often roused the indignant eloquence of the Liberals of Europe during the enrly part of this century. The only favourable point of the transfer is, that there is no hypnerisy about it, no pretence of deciding by the ballot-box that which has been determined already by the award. The people are disposed of like a flook of sheek. price of transfer is fixed, and an extempt is made to pulliate the odious character of the bargain. The case of Lauenburg is distinct from that of the other Duchies. The people never complained of the Government of Denmark, which was mild. and such as to secure their prosperity. In 1803 they sent to Copenhagen an midress expressing their loyalty to a Government which had used them well.
